

Formative Feedback

Feedback is information provided to team members through verbal or nonverbal communication, either intentionally or unintentionally. Formative feedback is shared to improve team performance.

Formative feedback should be:

- Appreciative—expresses gratitude and notes actions that team members do well.
- Timely—given soon after the target behavior has occurred.
- Respectful—focuses on behaviors, not personal attributes.
- Specific—relates to a specific task or behavior that requires correction or improvement.
- Directed toward improvement—provides directions for future improvement.
- Considerate—considers a team member's feelings and delivers negative information with fairness and respect.
- Patient focused— addresses impact of team behaviors on the patient's well-being.
